A LEGACY LETTER

From One Woman to Another, Across the Years

A Note to the Woman Writing This Letter

This letter is for you to write to a younger woman you are walking with — a mentee, a daughter, a younger friend, someone you have been praying over and investing in. You do not need perfect words. You need honest ones. Fill in each section at your own pace, in your own voice, and give it to her when the time feels right. She will keep this letter long after the season of your mentoring has passed.

Dear

What I See in You

Tell her what you genuinely notice — her gifts, her character, the specific things God has been growing in her.

What I Want You to Know About Hard Seasons

Share something God has proven faithful in your own life — a truth you want her to hold onto when things get difficult.

What I Am Praying Over Your Future

Write a specific prayer for her — for her faith, her calling, her relationships, whatever God puts on your heart.

A Scripture I Am Leaving With You

Write out a verse that you want her to return to. You may want to include a sentence about why this one matters.

One More Thing I Want You to Remember

Anything else — an encouragement, a warning given in love, a reminder of who she is in Christ.

With love and hope for all God has ahead of you,

Signed,
